Commercial, Feb. 25: The price of oats has continued very firm and higher prices are asked. Values, however, are very irregular and there is a wide range of quotations, which is partly owing to the great variation in the quality of the last crop, and partly to the varying views of holders. We have heard of sales of car lots on track here of feed oats at a range of 20c to 24c. One car was sold at the lower quotation, but it was poor quality, slightly damp. Most holders, however, are asking higher than the range quoted. Some have asked as high as 30c for cars at country points, equal to 25c on track here, the freight rate being nearly 11c per bushel from Edmonton to Winnipeg. These are expected to be fancy oats for seed purposes. For seed milling such high prices will be paid. Prices of oats have now reached a point where consumption will be greatly curtailed, as consumers will now turn to corn, which is already coming in in increased quantities.

THE YUKON AGAIN.

An all-Canadian route to the Yukon would be a good thing for Canada and for the Yukon, and now that the permanent value of the northern mining country is assured, and now that railway access from the coast is already an accomplished fact, the subject can be approached in a fair and reasonable spirit, without any of the hysterical mouthings which formed the basis of the Globe editorial on this subject a year ago. Unfortunately the Globe's hysteria appears to be breaking out again, and in a recent article it displays a lack of knowledge of geographical facts and of the course of trade that is worthy of its cousin the Winnipeg Free Press. Apparently the Globe hopes to engineer a new Yukon deal by working on the natural antagonism of the liberal party to the senate and on the reasonable and patriotic desire for an all-Canadian route. An all-Canadian route that would give the advantage to United States trade is not the kind of an all-Canadian route that the business people of Canada need, or want—but that is the kind the Globe is howling for. Canadian trade requires permanent and direct access to the Yukon over our own territory, along lines that will put Canadian wholesalers, manufacturers and farmers in the most favorable position possible—as compared with their United States competitors for the Yukon trade. The Globe's pet scheme did not do this, nor will a revival of it be any better than the original. A railway from the Pacific coast to the Yukon, even though every foot were on Canadian soil would be for the advantage of United States and not of Canadian trade, as much as the short line of the C. P. R. through the State of Maine, although entirely on United States soil, is entirely for the benefit of Canadian trade. It is to be hoped that the resources of the Yukon region or of Canada will not be expended in constructing an all-Canadian route in name, but an all-American route in fact.

THE TREATY COMMISSION.

The failure of the treaty commission at Washington will not cause grief in many hearts in this part of Canada's fair domain. While the government is entitled to all credit for having made a strong and careful attempt to improve the relations between the two countries, they are much more entitled to credit for declining to yield an atom of Canada's rights except for full value. There are many Canadians who heard of the close of the negotiations with a sigh of relief. Canada has fared badly hitherto in any negotiations into which she has entered with the United States. Far better have no results at all than to add another to the list of Canadian surrenders. As far as the agricultural west is concerned Canada has nothing to gain and everything to lose by closer trade relations with our neighbors. The market of 60 millions of which so much has been said in the past does not exist for us. They are 60 millions of competitors, not customers. They compete with us—they are our chief competitors—in the British market in wheat, in cattle, in dairy products, in everything in short that we have to sell. However friendly we may desire to be with them it is not business to concede to our competitors. They not only compete abroad, but at home. They are our chief competitors throughout British Columbia and in the Yukon country. Friendship with neighbors is a very good thing, but all the same business is business. What we have we want to hold.

The soul of the Free Press is sad within it, as may be gathered from the following two editorial paragraphs appearing in a recent issue:

"The Hon. Peter Mitchell complains that Canada does not reward her public men and is careless what becomes of them. Mr. Mitchell has not much cause to complain, for he is in receipt of a pension, in the disguise of a salary for a sinecure, of $1,800."
"If Mr. Beauchamp, M. P., is made postmaster at Montreal it will be a large advertisement for every member of parliament supporting the government that the sally, supporter, the unreliable follower, the sicker, and the bolter are best qualified to receive government favors.

To the Free Press politics is salary, nothing more and nothing less, and it appears to be reaching the conclusion that its political course is not that most likely to ensure salary. It is cruel that its high ideals should be thus shattered.

KITTLE RIVER RAILWAY.

The following is the amendment moved by Andrew Strang, and carried at a recent meeting of the Winnipeg board of trade:

"That whereas this board at the time of the disallowance of the Manitoba railway charters took strong grounds against such action and interference, and advocated freedom in railway building, and opposed interference from outsiders in the purely local affairs of the province; and whereas this railway is local to the province of British Columbia: This board considers that it should not in any way interfere to prevent the fullest and most free development of that province by opposing the free railway intercourse of that province with adjoining states and provinces at whatever point may be found advantageous to the said province. Therefore this board desires to be placed on record as strongly in favor of granting a charter to this railway, particularly as it is proposed to build the road without any aid from the public."

The amendment was supported by Messrs. Russell, Ashdown, Richardson, M.P., Jameson, M.P., and others. Mr. J. H. Brock in a strong speech said it was a fatal mistake to put any province or portion of a province in the power of any monopoly, corporation or individual. He was going to vote for the amendment with both hands and would feel ashamed to live in Winnipeg if the board of trade could pass such a resolution as the original motion.

ON THE UPPER PORCUPINE.

The Free Press of recent issue republishes an account from the Seattle Post-Intelligencer of last fall's adventures of J. A. Ritchie, Montreal, and A. McPhee, of Winnipeg; Roy Moffat, of Pembroke, Phillip Bellevue, of Duluth, and Alex. Holmes, of Fresno, Cal., who left Edmonton for the Yukon by the Mackenzie route in the fall of '97. The letter conveying the information was written at Seventy-mile river, Alaska, on Dec. 20th '98.

After getting to the waters of the Porcupine branch of the Yukon in July of 1898, these men, who were of different parties, except McPhee and Moffat, went up the Porcupine prospecting instead of down stream to Fort Yukon. Winter found them too far up the Porcupine to make it desirable to descend to La Pierre's house and Fort McPherson, so they undertook to travel across country—200 miles to the Yukon at Forty mile—the route taken by Ogilvie to reach the headwaters of the Porcupine some years ago. Soon after starting Holmes froze both his feet, and he decided to turn back and trust to getting enough salmon at a certain hole in the ice to keep off starvation until help should come. Moffat and Bellevue decided to remain with Holmes, while Ritchie and McPhee pushed on, intending to return with help. The three men remaining kept seven dogs while Ritchie and McPhee pushed on with four. The parties separated on Oct. 31st. Ritchie and McPhee reached a cabin on the Yukon 130 miles below Dawson in ten days after leaving their companions. They lost one dog. Ritchie and two of the owners of the cabin returned at once for Holmes, Moffat and Bellevue, taking a month's provisions. They were gone six weeks and had nearly started to death before their return. When they reached the camp where Holmes and party had been left they found it abandoned and a note stating that the party had found it impossible to keep up the necessary supply of game and fish, and fearing that help might be delayed had started down the Porcupine for La Pierre's house, 200 miles, as they knew the road that way, having come over it, and did not know what had become of McPhee and Ritchie.

McPhee and Ritchie are confident that there is no gold on the upper waters of the Porcupine.

OATS IN MANITOBA.

Winnipeg Tribune, Feb. 24: Oats are going to be scarce. Indications show this and it is almost impossible to get good oats—that is, for seedling. The price is expected to reach the 40c mark inside of a couple of months.
